

HON. DENNIS CONSIDINE.

The Next Supervisor of the Town of West Chicago.

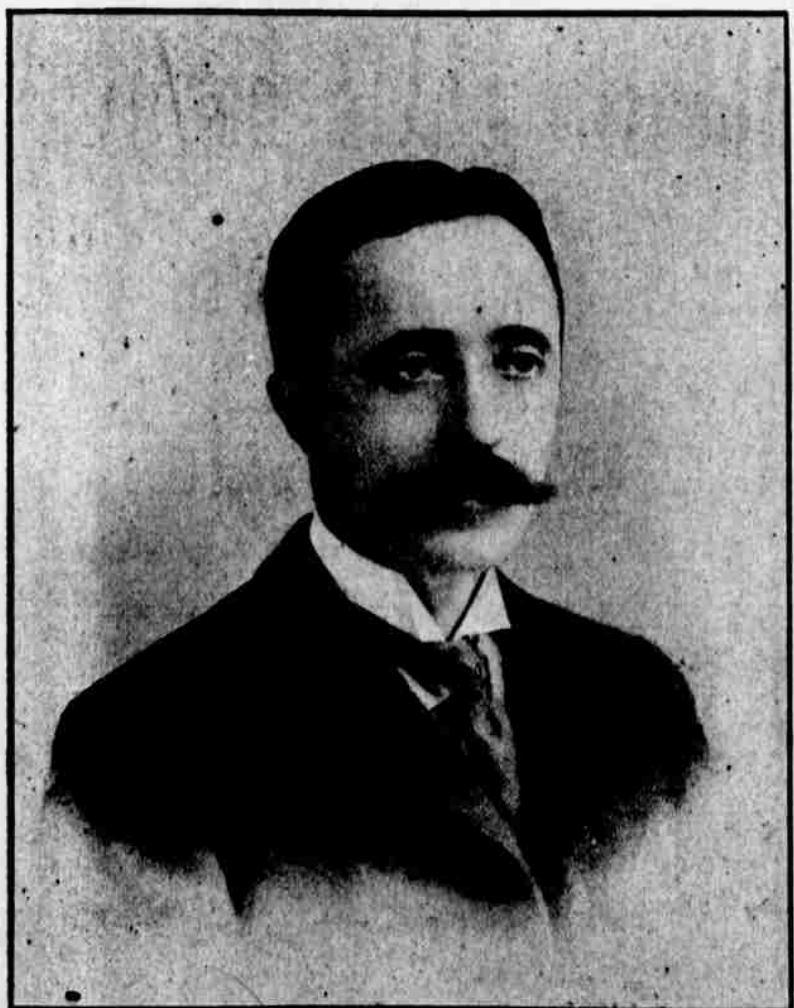

Few men are better known or better liked in Chicago than Dennis Considine. He is an old-time printer who fielded a case in the daily newspaper offices of this city for many years. In public life he has always been a credit to the city and his name is without a blemish. When Mr. Considine was Supervisor of the West Town before, he had in his official possession over $40,000 of town funds. Every cent of this was turned over to his successor the very day that the latter took his office. It may be stated without violating any secrets that Mr. Considine is the only ex-West Town Supervisor who has so good a record as this. He is again a candidate for the position of Supervisor of the West Town, and there is hardly any doubt about his election by a big majority. Personally he is the soul of honor, gentleness and able, and the people of the West Side are to be congratulated over the prospect of the election of so good a man.

Hon. A. W. Maltby, of the Twenty-second Ward, is distinctively an anti-machine and anti-boodle candidate. During his term in the Council now drawing to a close he has opposed every boodle-tainted piece of legislation and has been aggressive and active in support of every measure tending to the advancement and betterment of Chicago. He is hated by all the grafters and hoodlums. He is despised by the fellows who want to get their names on stuffed payrolls. He was entitled to the regular Democratic nomination and, in fact, received it, but "Bob" Burke managed to get his name on the regular ticket. Mr. Maltby is, however, running as an independent candidate. He has the cordial support of the Municipal Voters' League. Democrats, Republicans and Independents opposed to gang rule will make common cause in working and voting for Mr. Maltby. He should be re-elected without fail in the interest of the public welfare.

White House Etiquette.

All good Americans may be supposed to feel an interest in the social doings of the President and the President's wife. High station, even in a republic, has its own code of etiquette. Things must be done, even simple every-day things, according to established precedent: for in one sense, there are no people in the United States who have so little liberty to consult their own wishes and tastes as the occupants of the White House. The illustrated American thus sets forth some of the unwritten laws to which they are strictly subject.

When the President and his wife drive out, the President sits upon the right-hand seat and his wife on the left. If there are others in the carriage, whether ladies or gentlemen, they must sit with their backs to the horses. When the President's wife drives alone, she sits in the right-hand corner—the place of honor.

The lady of the White House cannot set foot within those splendid houses in Washington whose flagstaffs mark the foreign embassy or legation. She could not go without the President, and as an embassy or legation is technically a part of the country it represents, the President could not go—so that she never sees the inside of a diplomatic house as long as she presides at the executive mansion.

The President dines only at cabinet houses, and his wife cannot dine anywhere without him. President Arthur dined with judges of the Supreme Court and with Senators—but as he had no wife, the whole system was very much simplified for him. The President's wife may, if she chooses, go to luncheons where there are no gentlemen, or to teas, both being regarded as strictly informal, but the danger of giving offense by accepting one invitation and declining another is so great that it is seldom or never risked.

At a state dinner the etiquette of the White House is exactly the reverse of the custom at a private dinner. The guests assemble in the east room and await the President and his wife, who appear on the stroke of the clock. Woe betide the late guest! He has committed a national or international breach of etiquette. At the table the President is served first, his wife next, then the guests in order of precedence.

An invitation to the White House is a command, and takes precedence of all others, even of a dinner at one's own house. An infringement of this rule would be regarded as a shocking breach of the amenities.

The President's sister may be at the head of the White House, as Mrs. McElroy was during President Arthur's administration, and Miss Rose Cleveland during a part of Mr. Cleveland's first administration; but her position is never like that of the President's wife. She has much more latitude, and although she follows in a general way the etiquette laid down for the President's wife, she has by no means the recognized official standing of the "first lady of the land."

The younger and more inexperienced a woman is when she enters the White House, the more likely she is to succeed; since she is likely to do as she is told, without presuming to act upon her own judgment. This is one secret of Mrs. Cleveland's success.

How many South Town bills has "Sam" Trade "compromised" in his position as Supervisor?
